B. BACKGROUND

The Hogg Foundation advances recovery and wellness in Texas by funding mental health services, policy analysis, research, and public education. The foundation was created in 1940 by the children of former Texas Governor James S. Hogg and is part of the Division of Diversity and Community Engagement at The University of Texas at Austin.

School personnel are focused on promoting strong academic achievement. An often-underestimated influence on performance is student mental health. An emerging consensus of scientists and key agencies, including the National Institute of Mental Health, recognizes that the human brain is not fully developed until at least the early 20s and often later. Most students therefore do not have fully matured systems of emotional regulation and behavioral control during key educational phases: kindergarten through college. This can be challenging for teachers and professors who have deep expertise in their specialties, but little training to support student mental health.

Fortunately, there is a range of well-researched mental health interventions linked to improved academic outcomes. A recent review of the literature indicated that students receiving these interventions “showed greater resilience and emotional functioning as evidenced by increased academic motivation, self-efficacy, commitment to school, and stability during grade-level transitions. At the school level, intervention sites reported less violence, bullying and other problem behaviors among students.” (Price, Biehl, Solomon & Weir, 2014). The same review noted that these improvements led to better academic achievement as well as improved learning-related behaviors and patterns such as “on-task learning behavior, better time management, strengthened goal-setting and problem-solving skills, and decreased rates of absenteeism and suspensions.” (Price, et al., 2014).
A campus-based mental health system includes intervention and wellness. It provides social and emotional support for all students, builds the capacity for the people in their lives to support them at school and at home, and addresses barriers to learning. It ensures that mental health supports and interventions are culturally and linguistically appropriate for the student body.

C. INITIATIVE DESCRIPTION

The goals of this initiative are to improve academic outcomes and mental wellness in educational settings through culturally and linguistically appropriate mental health supports and interventions.

Through this three-year grant program, the foundation plans to fund Texas public schools, charter schools, school districts, college and university campuses, and nonprofit 501(c)(3) organizations. The foundation has a preference for funding nonprofit organizations with a strong history of providing campus-based mental health supports and interventions.

Proposals must address the cultural and linguistic needs of the identified students. Applicants with existing resources in the educational setting may submit a proposal that allows for expansion of their work to address additional needs.

Applicants may want to consider including a planning period during the first months of the grant to identify strategies for implementation, and to identify and meet with potential community partners.

D. INITIATIVE DETAILS

1. Eligible Organizations
   - Texas public schools, charter schools, school districts, college and university campuses, and nonprofit 501(c)(3) organizations.

show the effects of grant-funded activities. The grantee may be asked to provide stories from staff, service recipients, community members, and other stakeholders that illustrate
